the 1990s, the number of people in the UK who are aged 65 and over has increased from 10.5 million to 13.5 million (1990-2000) (ONS 2001).

There is a growing awareness of the need to address the health care needs of the elderly population. The Department of Health (2000) has set out a strategy for the NHS to meet the needs of the elderly population. This strategy is based on the following principles:

- To ensure that the elderly population has access to the services they need.
- To ensure that the elderly population is able to live independently for as long as possible.
- To ensure that the elderly population is able to live in their own homes for as long as possible.
- To ensure that the elderly population is able to live in their own communities for as long as possible.

The NHS is committed to meeting these principles and is working to ensure that the elderly population has access to the services they need.
